The Partnership is the originator of science-based food safety messages and the national leader in developing and disseminating information around the linkage of food safety consumer education with positive health outcomes.

The Partnership brings together public and private sector organizations to focus on prevention of food poisoning in the United States.

- convenes practitioner communities inside and outside government to work together to improve outcomes in food safety education
- helps educators tell the story of the impact their work has on protecting the health of consumers
- leads efforts to evaluate the impact of consumer food safety education

"You are the first source I look to for food safety education information!"

The Partnership for Food Safety Education

Across the U.S., health and nutrition educators, classroom teachers, and other community-based educators use the resources of the Partnership for Food Safety Education to connect with consumers about the importance of safe food handling to good health.

The Partnership delivers trusted, science-based behavioral health messaging and a network of resources that support consumers in their efforts to reduce risk of foodborne infection.

“Having research-based information to present or email to co-workers validates what I say about how we should handle our foods to prevent foodborne illness.”
- R. Dyson, Health Coach
